

1. The kites flew high in the sky, dipping down and then rising again.
What sort of day was it?

2. It was the smell of burning bacon which finally drew his attention back to what he should have been doing.
What should he have been doing?

3. He rested on the long handle of the axe and looked at the deep cut in the tree.
What had he been doing?

4. THE WIND

The wind was so strong that if you leant into it, it would hold you up. Jason was doing this when the wind suddenly died down. As his mother cleaned the graze on his knee, Jason told her what had happened. She laughed at the story.

- a. What happened to Jason when the wind died down?
- b. Was Jason badly hurt? How do you know that?

5. TOAST

Shane put the bread in the toaster, pushed the lever down and went on reading his book. Ten minutes later Tessa came into the kitchen. She looked at the toaster and flicked the switch on at the wall. It wasn't long before the toast was ready.

- a. Why didn't Shane notice that the toast wasn't cooking?
- b. Why didn't the toast cook when Shane pushed the lever down?

6. MELISSA

Melissa looked back over her shoulder and saw the thick, dark clouds moving towards her. She heard the rustling leaves in the trees and pulled her new red hat down firmly on her head.

The bag on her bike was still half full. Melissa pedalled as hard as she could, quickly pushing morning papers into mail boxes.

At last she was almost finished. She just had to cross the bridge then make the long ride up Riverside Street.

Her bag now empty, her legs tired and sore, Melissa turned her bike around. She freewheeled down Riverside Street towards home. The clouds were almost overhead but there was no rain yet, just wind. Melissa tried to grab her hat, but it had gone. She last saw it sailing over the side of the bridge. Then the rain came.

- a. Why did Melissa pull her hat down?
- b. Why did she pedal as hard as she could?
- c. Where did Melissa's paper delivery finish?
- d. What is Riverside Street like?
- e. Why did Melissa's hat go sailing over the bridge?